to go back to the Russian blousevorite has a history, more or less true, hen Peter the Great came to the throne Russia the men of all classes re coats which came down to their and which also had the virtue of ping their heels warm during their ere winters. Peter, though, was pro-ssive, like the new woman of to-day. s should wear a shorter coat, and he ng up everywhere about the cities apples of the elegant garments which approved. Suppose President Me-approved. Suppose President Me-nley ordered our dresses for us. We have a suppose the control of the control of the law and the control of sian of the lower classes was fond it was a plenty of dirt and a plenty length to his coat. Nevertheless, for had his way. If any Mujik or yar entered the gates of a city wearthe condemned cloak, there he found esors. And the servant of the Czar, or shearing off the victim's leg procors, added insult to injury by giving a coat, above the walst, a final jerk at left it still shorter and made it was over the belt. If this is the use over the dainty Russian blouse of 7. the waist must have gone through long process of evolution.

Jewelled buttons are stitched on closely from the shouldes on the shouldest. m the shoulder to the walst at one side. In skirts, there has been a steady thrinkage. The widest have only five scres, and measure five yards at the bottom binding, while the upper part is as narrow as yokes and gores can make it. Skirts made with the yokes are affections to the spirit of the thrifty dressmaker, as they cannot readily be made over. However, such patterns had better be accepted with thanksgiving by the very tall girl. The yokes, double skirts, and hanging ribbons, are Fashion's afterthoughts in her behalf, at a time when all, or nearly all, the modes have a long effect. A circular skirt is one of the prettiest of all; but experienced is the dressmaker who attempts this pattern. The season's color pallet seems to have been made up in Spain or Haly. It has In skirts, there has been a steady peen made up in Spain or Italy. It has such bright colors as petunia, red, a creep a shade and a half darker than merald, and grays combined with every olor that the sun ever dreamed of. treet-wear, though, only the darker thades are shown. In connection with the apparel of old and young, there are really no commandments graven on stone. The most fashionable tollette is the one that is meat fitting and becoming.

In housefurnishings there are some beautiful noveltles. Light Venetian frames for handsome pictures are regnant. The old solid frame that thew a shadow on the fine, painted clothes of one's ancestor has at last been relegated to the company of the horse-hair sofa.

The latest paperings seem to be designed by artists who have lived only in palaces. The large, handsome figures that make a small room look still smaller, prevail. In these designs tich and even dark colors are used. One very striking sample of papering seen lately had a brilliant red background, stamped with flamingoes rampant. It is hinted that some designs of papering used before the goes rampant. It is hinted that some de-signs of papering used before the war will be imported from Paris. They are the old sanel paperings, painted with the picture of some prancing horses, rush They are ing rivers, or entrancing ladies. A room would be rather tiresome. It is to be hoped that Paris will decide not to force them on us, and instead will soon let us know the other fads and
